Current British family

- As in fairly typical European country
- Nuclear family has a generally low profile
- Weddings, births, funerals are not large gatherings
- Generation gap – outdated stereotype
- Rebellious teenagers-short-lived phenomenon of the past

Wedding

Christening

Current British family

- Average number of people living in a household lower than the European average
- Stereotypical nuclear family of married parents less common
- Proportion of children born outside marriage has risen
- Single-parent families: a social problem

The three classes

- Upper
- Middle
- Working

The class structure can be recognized from:

- Different attitudes
- Different daily habits
- Eat different food at different meal time
- Meals are called by different names
- Talk about different topics
- Read different newspapers

Broadsheet or tabloid? That's the question...

Class system can be seen

- Different styles, fashion, designs
- Speak different accents
- Enjoy different pastimes and sports
- Respect different values
- Follow different ideas about the correct way to behave

Golf vs Football

An interesting feature:

- NOT wealth and appearance, clothes, car or bank account DETERMINE THE CLASS

The most obvious sign:

- A person opens his mouth and reveals his attitudes, opinions and interests

Is the idea of a teenager as a sort of separate species, endlessly rowing with their parents still alive?

NO, 4 of 5 British teenagers are happy at home and get on well with their parents
